Our Thanks

A book with more than twenty authors from across the world could not have been put together in a year's time without prompt and timely assistance from several people who provided excellent support to the editors throughout this effort.

We start with Professor Stewart Clegg, who agreed to have this book included in the Advances in Organization Studies published by Copenhagen Business School Press soon after we sounded him out about our idea a year ago.

We would like to thank Associate Professor Jens Aaris Thisted, Peer Review Coordinator of CBS Press, for agreeing to take on the book during our meeting with him at the EGOS Conference in Helsinki in July 2012 and for his considered advice on the chapters sent for his review.

The energy and enthusiasm embedded in the 'smilies' that Hanne Thorninger Ipsen, Manuscript Editor of CBS Press, sent us through her emails kept us going. She really kept the ball rolling once the chapters had been accepted to take it to the finishing line.

We would like to thank Claire Annals who patiently copyedited the book. The team at CBS Press has worked hard to get this book out on schedule as we were determined to release it at the 11th IRNOP (The International Research Network on Organizing by Projects) conference in Oslo, Norway.

The editors would like to thank Dr. Gita Sankaran, who helped us when we wanted an experienced proofreader and copyeditor to review what we had written to support the chapters.

We would like to express our gratitude to the prominent scholars from around the world who have endorsed this book.

Last but not the least, we would like to thank all the authors for also helping us by taking prompt action when we asked them to do so and sending us encouraging messages from time to time.

Notes on the Contributors

Monique Aubry, PhD, is a Professor and Director of Project Management Programs at the School of Management, Université du Québec à Montréal (ESG UQAM). Her principal research interest bears on organizing for projects and organizational design, more specifically on Project Management Offices (PMO). She received the 2012 IPMA Research Award for her research on PMOs along with Brian Hobbs and Ralf Müller. The results of her work have been published in major project academic journals and presented at several international conferences, both research and professional. She is a member of the Project Management Research Chair (www.pmchair.uqam.ca) at ESG UQAM. She is member of the Standards Member Advisory Group and the Research Informed Standards Steering committee of the Project Management Institute. She is department editor of Organizational Side of Project Management and Management of Organizational Projects for Project Management Journal.

Marc Banik, PhD (Urbana-Champaign), is a Professor of Bio-Industry Management at the École des sciences de la gestion at the Université du Québec à Montréal (ESG UQAM). His teaching and research focus on intellectual property management, R&D management and regulation of health care products. He is a member of the Centre interuniversitaire de recherche sur la science et la technologie (CIRST) at UQAM and teaches principles of management and technology transfer.

Mario Bourgault, PhD, PMP, is a full Professor at École Polytechnique, Montreal, Canada. He has conducted over a decade of research in the field of innovation and project management. Mario has held the Canada Research Chair in Technology Project Management since 2004. He also heads the École Polytechnique Graduate Program in Project Management. His work has been published in a number of journals, including Project Management Journal, International Journal of Project Management, R&D Management, and International Journal of Managing Projects in Business. In addition to his academic credentials, Mario spent several years in the field working as a professional engineer, and he maintains close ties with the industry by participating in various research projects and acting as an expert consultant.

Christophe Bredillet, PhD (ESC Lille), is a Professor and the Director of the Queensland University of Technology, Australia's Project Management Academy and specializes in the fields of Portfolio, Programme & Project Management (P3M). From 1992 to 2010, Christophe was the Dean of Postgraduate Programmes & Studies, and Professor, Head of School 'Strategic Management & P3M' at ESC Lille. In 2001 he launched a series of International 3PM Weeks hosted by ESC Lille, followed by the first EDEN doctoral seminar in Project Management in 2008. Christophe's main interests and research activities are in the field of Philosophy of Science and Practice in P3M, including principles and theories of P3M, dynamics of evolution of the P3M field, bodies of knowledge, standards, observation of P3M practices and their link with Governance and Performance at organizational, team and individual levels. Christophe was the Executive Editor of the Project Management Journal from 2004 to 2012.

Roslyn Cameron, PhD, FAHRI, is a Senior Lecturer and Head of Discipline of Human Resource Management at the School of Business and Law at Central Queensland University, Australia. She is Co-Convenor of the Mixed Methods Research Special Interest Group of the Australian and New Zealand Academy of Management (ANZAM) and a founding Board member of the Prior Learning International Research Centre (PLIRC). Her areas of research interest include skilled migration, workforce development, labour mobility, vocational education and training (VET), recognition of prior learning (RPL) and mixed-methods research. She has received over $1.09 million (AUD) of research funding and has over 70 publications. She has worked on a series of workforce development projects for the Australian rail industry including: Skilled migration; attraction and image; skills recognition and coaching and mentoring. She has contributed chapters to edited books in relation to the use of mixed methods in DBA theses, VET, career development, management disciplines and skills recognition.

Robert Chia, PhD (Lancaster), is Research Professor of Management at the Adam Smith Business School, University of Glasgow. He has authored/edited five books including Strategy without Design and Philosophy and Organization Theory and published extensively in the top international management journals including the Academy of Management Journal, Organization Science, Organization Studies, Human Relations, Journal of Management Studies, British Journal of Management, Journal of Management Inquiry and Long Range Planning. His research interests include: The application of process thinking to human actions, decisions and organization; the logic of practice in strategy-making; east-west philosophies/wisdom and their implications for the conduct of business; and the purpose of management education in relation to the university/industry nexus. Prior to entering academia Robert worked for 16 years in Aircraft Maintenance Engineering and held senior positions in Manufacturing Management and Human Resource Management.

Stewart Clegg, PhD (Bradford), BSc Hons (Aston), is Professor and Research Director of CMOS (Centre for Management and Organisation Studies) at the University of Technology Sydney, Australia. He is one of the most published and cited authors in the top-tier journals in the Organization Studies field. Because the central focus of his theoretical work has always been on power relations he has been able to write on many diverse and ubiquitous topics – because power relations are everywhere!

He is the principal author of two textbooks: Management & Organizations: An Introduction to Theory and Practice and Strategy: Theory and Practice. He is the chief editor of the Handbook of Organization Studies, Handbook of Power and Handbook of Macro-Organizational Behaviour. His latest publications are The Virtues of Leadership: Contemporary Challenges for Global Managers as principal author and a set of 'Major Works' on Power and Organizations and Political Power and Organizations, jointly edited with Mark Haugaard.

Hemanta Doloi, PhD, is a Senior Lecturer specializing in the Construction Management program at the University of Melbourne, Australia. Hemanta's major research interest is on Life Cycle Project Management and this new methodology has been extended significantly based on the concepts such as process modeling, strategic project management and decision theory over the last few years. He has published over 100 scholarly articles in both international journals and conferences. Hemanta is a sole author of the book Life Cycle Project Management – A Systems-based Approach to Managing Complex Projects published in 2008. In 2012 Hemanta was awarded the 'Infinite Value Award in Research and Teaching' by the Australian Institute of Quantity Surveyors (AIQS) and he is widely consulted in the corporate world.

Nathalie Drouin, PhD (Cambridge), MBA (HEC-Montréal), LL.B., is the Associate Dean in Research and former Director of Graduate programs in Project Management, School of Management at Université du Québec à Montréal (ESG UQAM) and a full professor, Department of Management and Technology, ESG UQAM. She teaches initiation and strategic management of projects in the Graduate Project Management Programs. The results of her work have been published in major academic journals and presented at several international conferences, both research and professional. Her research has also been funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRC), the Canadian Institute of Health Research (CIHR), the Quebec Research Council (FRSQ), and other sources such as the Project Management Institute and ESG-UQAM Research Grants (PAFARC). She is an associate researcher of the Canada Research Chair on Technology Project Management and a Member of the Scientific Committee of the Project Management Research Chair, ESG UQAM.

Michael Er, Dr, PhD Masters Inf.Tech Bachelor Building, studied construction management as an undergraduate and on completion worked professionally for over a decade across a variety of construction roles such as project manager and project supervisor. The interpretive case studies developed as part of the PhD research used Activity Theory as a lens of interpretation. Michael has several publications associated with the application of Activity Theory in research. He is currently a Senior Lecturer at the University of Technology Sydney, Australia in the Faculty of Design Architecture and Building. He continues to research in the area of construction and project management particularly in the field of innovation and technology adoption. Michael maintains strong industry contact which provides a platform for the application of his ongoing research.

Serghei Floricel, PhD, MBA, B. Eng., is a Professor at the University of Quebec in Montreal, where he teaches project feasibility and innovation project management. His research focuses on planning and organizing complex projects, and on innovation processes. He has published, among others, in International Journal of Project Management, R&D Management, Research-Technology Management, International Journal of Innovation Management, and has presented at numerous conferences, including Academy of Management. He is lead author of two monographs published by the PMI: Increasing Project Flexibility and Refining the Knowledge Production Plan, and co-author of The Strategic Management of Large Engineering Projects (MIT Press, 2001). He was Research Director for the Managing Innovation in the New Economy (MINE) program, and Principal Investigator for five other research projects. He has produced a website on managing innovation projects (www.pmchair.uqam.ca) and co-developed a tool for assessing the risks of such projects.

Robert Joslin, BSc (Durham), PMP, PgMP, CEng, MIEEE, MBCS, is a project/program management consultant and academic researcher. He has considerable experience in designing, initiating and program management delivery of large scale business transformation, reengineering, infrastructure, strategy development including winning prizes for ideas and product innovation. Previously, he has been a consultant in a wide range of industries including telecom, banking, insurance, manufacturing and direct marketing whilst working for McKinsey & Co, Logica and his own consulting company. Robert is currently studying for a PhD in 'Strategy, Programme & Project Management' at SKEMA Business School in France. During this time he has published book chapters and is in the process of authoring a book on portfolio, program and project management success factors.

Kam Jugdev, PhD, PMP, is a Professor of Project Management and Strategy in the Faculty of Business at Athabasca University. She also served as an Adjunct Professor in the Department of Civil Engineering, Schulich School of Engineering, University of Calgary. Prior to becoming an academic, Kam worked in both the public and private sector industry as a project manager. She develops and teaches project management courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Her federally funded research ($228,091) includes two Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council grants. Kam's research program spans: Project management lessons learned and communities of practice; project management tools and techniques; project success/failure; and project management as a source of competitive advantage using the Resource Based View of the Firm. Kam enjoys being able to relate theory to practice with students and through her research.

Catherine Killen, PhD (MGSM), M.Eng Mgt (UTS), BSc (Virginia) is the coordinator for innovation programs in the Faculty of Engineering and IT at the University of Technology Sydney, Australia. Catherine conducts research on innovation processes with a focus on project portfolio management and has published more than 50 journal articles and conference papers in the area. She develops and teaches courses and programs on technological innovation at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels. She employs qualitative, quantitative and mixed-methods in her research. Recent work includes ‘best practice’ survey-based research, qualitative analysis drawing upon strategic management theories, and industry-based and classroom-based ‘experiments’ where new methods are employed and evaluated. Catherine’s current research themes include the alignment of project portfolios with organizational strategy, the evolution and contextualisation of project portfolio management approaches, and the use of visual data representations for the management of project interdependencies within a project portfolio.

Kristian Kreiner, PhD (DTU Denmark), MSc (CBS), is Professor in Organization at Copenhagen Business School (CBS). Kristian designed and directed the Center for Management Studies of the Building Process (www.clibyg.org) which was financed by the private foundation Realdania. In this capacity he has conducted multiple ethnographic studies of various aspects of construction, including architectural competitions and actual work practices on construction sites. His research interests are concerned with how work is accomplished in practice, and how organization, collaboration, coordination etc. are not premises for such work, but co-produced in the work process. Demonstrating empirically why such accomplishments are inherently difficult his research focuses on how people may become empowered to make work achievements possible.

Pierre-Luc Lalonde, PhD (École Polytechnique, Montreal), is a General Manager of the Dominican Sisters of Canada, and acts as a management consultant for various religious communities, where he helps identify and address key challenges. Under the supervision of Professors Mario Bourgault and Alain Findeli, he investigated various epistemological and methodological issues of project management practice and research. He has presented at numerous conferences and his work has been published in several journals, including International Journal of Project Management and Project Management Journal. Pierre-Luc has received prestigious scholarships from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. He also received a grant for his postdoctoral research conducted under the Canada Research Chair on Technology Project Management.

Elysabeth Leigh, EdD, MEd, Dip Ed, BA, has been a professional educator for over 30 years working with adult learners in business and academic contexts. As an experienced designer of simulations, games and role-play, she has worked in places
