Aknowledgements

The making of this dissertation has been possible due to the generosity of a number of people. First of all, I am greatly indebted to the radio listeners, employees, volunteers and others who gave me their time and trusted me with their thoughts and experiences in the midst of their busy lives, some of them in Paris, others in Belgium, Algeria and Denmark. Without you, there would have been no project, and I truly hope that my writings do you justice.

In Paris, I also wish to thank my grandmother Jacqueline Donel, Françoise Mauro for keeping me sane and Natan Elkin, Louis Arnavon, Georges Yannou and Noémie Fossey-Sergent for gracious friendship.

This study is part of the project “Optimal Distortion: Comparative Ethnographies of Paradoxical Connections” funded by the Danish Council for Culture and Communications headed by Morten Axel Pedersen and with the participation of Lise Røjskjær Pedersen, Nigel Rapport, Nina Holm Vohnsen, Morten Nielsen and Henrik Vigh. I am thankful to the Danish Council for Culture and Communications to have been able to carry out the project, and feel incredibly privileged to have been part of such an inspiring group.

I owe a special acknowledgment to Morten Axel Pedersen, my supervisor. Our conversations have truly been inspiring and formative; it has been a privilege to relentlessly be pushed by you. Thank you. I furthermore would like to thank Morten Nielsen, my co-supervisor, for generous readings and sparkling inputs.

I feel incredibly lucky to have amazing colleagues and amongst them dear friends. I am grateful to the Department of Anthropology at the University of Copenhagen and the inspiring people who work there. For especially careful readings, for collaborations and for friendship that made it all matter, I would like to thank Ida Sofie Matzen, Aja Smith, Lise Røjskjær Pedersen, Adrienne Mannov, Marie Kolling, Line Richter, Astrid Grue, Henrik Hvenegaard, Matthew Carey, Sofie Rosenlund Lau, Christina Leeson, Trine Mygind Korsby and Bettina Skårup.

I would like to thank the members of the Media|Ethnography Group, Nina Grønlykke Møllerup, Jørgen Skrubbeltrang, Rikke Hostrup Haugbølle and Jonas Agerbæk Jeppesen, for many inspiring conversations, careful readings and cake eating.

At the University of Copenhagen Amager, I have enjoyed discussing ethnographic radio studies with Katrine Wallevik and Kirstine Ringsager.

Before becoming a PhD fellow, I had the privilege to be part of the interdisciplinary research project LARM Audio Research Archive. I am grateful to Bente Larsen, Jacob Kreuzfeldt, Torben Sangild, Jacob Thøgersen and the rest of the group for many inspiring conversations on radio and all the rest.

I thank Susanna Sommer for being my all-time favorite sound guru, Aileen Itani for constructive and generous proofreading and Malik Thomas for helping me with the cover page.

I thank my parents, Jens and Isabelle, for helping in so many ways.

I thank Niels for encouragement, for support, for love and for beautiful sounds and Jona for coming along and making all the sounds and colors more intense.

Note on sound

This dissertation describes and analyzes three different French radio programs. I encourage readers to follow the links below to listen to soundbites of each of the programs. For each of the program there is a soundbite of the beginning of an episode and one of a conversation that is also described in the chapter concerned with that program. Hence, the soundbites are not translated, but the conversations are summarized in the respective chapters.
