

FACULTY OF SOCIAL SCIENCES
UNIVERSITY OF COPENHAGEN

Bangalore Beginnings

An Ethnography of Return Migration among Highly Skilled Indians

PhD Dissertation 2015 · Helene Ilkjær

Bangalore Beginnings

An Ethnography of Return Migration among Highly Skilled Indians

Helene Ilkjær

PhD Dissertation

Department of Anthropology
Faculty of Social Sciences
University of Copenhagen

Submitted: August 2015
Defended: November 2015

Supervisor: Karen Fog Olwig

Cover page photo: Helene Ilkjær

Bangalore Beginnings

An Ethnography of Return Migration among Highly Skilled Indians

PhD Dissertation 2015 © Helene Ilkjær

Printed book ISBN 978-87-7611-927-0

Ebook ISBN 978-87-7611-945-4

Printed by SL grafik, Frederiksberg C, Denmark (www.slgrafik.dk)

Acknowledgements

This dissertation has benefitted from the help, inspiration and support of a number of people and institutions in Copenhagen, Bangalore and Cambridge. First of all, I am indebted and deeply thankful to all the returnees in Bangalore who took the time to share their stories in the midst of busy lives. Without you, this project could not have materialized, and I truly hope that my writings do you justice.

In Bangalore I also wish to thank the Joseph family, in particular Sarojini and Nithya, who provided housing and invaluable help, especially during the first confusing months in the city. A big thank you also to the sweet and helpful employees and residents of the complex where I lived, especially Chetan, Dhananjay, Radnama, Girijamma, Vasanthi and Susan, who all contributed to making the place a great home.

Furthermore, I am grateful to the National Institute of Advanced Studies (NIAS) which housed me, academically, during my time in Bangalore. In particular I wish to thank professor Carol Upadhyia who kindly shared her extensive knowledge on IT professionals in Bangalore with me. A thank you is also owed to the Bangalore-based team involved with the ProvGlo research project at NIAS with whom I shared fieldwork experiences over lunches and in seminars.

This project has been funded by the Department of Anthropology at the University of Copenhagen. I am honoured to have been given the opportunity to carry out the project, and I remain thankful to the department and the many great people who work there. My supervisor, professor Karen Fog Olwig, has been an invaluable source of support and encouragement, and I truly appreciate the great interest she has taken in my project, including her travelling to India to visit me during my fieldwork. I also owe very special thanks to my many wonderful PhD colleagues at the department in particular to Trine Mygind Korsby, who has been a rock of support throughout this project, and to Maria-Louise Bønnelykke Robertson, Karina Dalgas, Trine Brinkmann and Katrine Gotfredsen.

While writing up this dissertation I have been based in Cambridge and I have had the absolute pleasure of being affiliated with the Centre of South Asian Studies at the University of Cambridge. The centre's library has provided an excellent working space and I have benefitted greatly from becoming part of the inspiring, fun, and supportive milieu created by the center's staff and the PhD students, who affectionately refer to this as their "home." In Cambridge, I wish in particular to thank Sazana Jayadeva, Laurence Gautier, Devyani Gupta, Saumya Saxena, Edward Anderson and Apurba Podder for many great talks and for their encouragement during my process of writing up.

And, not least, I owe my lovely family and friends a very big thank you for their unfaltering support. My parents and sister, Annette, Hans Peter and Pernille, and my parents-in-law, Dorte and Niels-Otto have stepped in numerous times to help out with childcare and household work during the last phase of writing, and for this I remain deeply thankful. My wonderful husband Jes has been by my side throughout this project, always as a source of unconditional love and care. Our son, Kristian, who was born during the writing of this dissertation, brightens up our lives in ways that are beyond words. Jes and Kristian, you are the lights of my life. Thank you.